CHARACTER HISTORY

Enikas Haglewegle was born into a humble gnomish family in the bustling city of Glendal.

From a young age, he showed a keen interest in nature and the magical arts. He would spend hours exploring the enchanted forests surrounding the city, collecting herbs, and observing the delicate balance of life.

Enikas's fascination with magic grew as he observed the spellcasters practicing their craft.

At the age of twelve, he convinced a local wizard to take him as an apprentice.

Under the guidance of the patient mentor, he learned the basics of magic, honing his skills in spellcasting and arcane rituals. As Enikas delved deeper into the magical arts, he discovered a particular affinity for potion making. He became enamored with the intricate process of blending various ingredients to create potent elixirs. Guided by his mentor, he studied the properties of herbs, mushrooms, and rare components, learning to harness their hidden powers.

As Enikas grew older, he realized that he had a natural affinity for trade and bartering. While continuing to pursuing his magical studies, he began to explore the bustling markets of Glendal.

Enikas discovered that his expertise in potions gave him an edge in negotiating deals and making profitable trades. He became known as the go-to gnome for rare ingredients, exotic artifacts, and magical potions. However, Enikas soon grew restless. He yearned for new adventures and sought to expand his knowledge of the world around him.
